viewpoint

“ I am unique amongst the partners at Latimer Hinks in that my Clients only ever contact me when things have gone wrong! Usually it is because someone has not paid them or is alleging that they have done something wrong.

I spend most of my day resolving problems. Essentially this means clearly identifying the outcome a Client wants and developing a strategy to achieve it. I add value by being “up front” with Clients in terms of the merits or otherwise of their case, by developing the right strategy for the circumstances and, wherever possible, by pointing out to Clients what caused the problem in the first place so they can ensure it doesn't arise again! ”
